

Miriam's Hobby

Script

Edna: What are you doing, Miriam?

Miriam: I'm doing origami.

Edna: Origami. What's that?

Miriam: It's the Japanese art of paper folding.

Edna: Oh. How often do you do origami?

Miriam: Well, it's my hobby. So like, if someone has a birthday or something, I like to try to learn a new fold and that will usually take me an hour or so.

Edna: How much time do you spend doing origami?

Miriam: Generally, about an hour per week maybe.

Edna: Oh. And where do you do it - at home?

Miriam: Yes. At home.

Edna: Okay. How did you learn how to do origami?

Miriam: I first started learning when I joined the origami club out at UBC when I was a student there.

Edna: Oh. Um. How long ago was that?

Miriam: Oh. That's about five years ago.

Edna: Wow. So you've been doing it for five years?

Miriam: At least five years.

Edna: How much does it get started?

Miriam: Well, if you use fancy paper, the actual origami paper, it's usually about $5.00 for a pack of paper. But really you can just use any paper. And then you can find instructions on how to fold things online. If you buy a book, books are probably about $20.00.

Edna: And why do you like it?

Miriam: Because you get to make cute little folded gifts and then you can give them away to your friends.

Edna: That is really cute. What is it?

Miriam: It's a little shirt.

Edna: Oh, that's really, really cute.

Miriam: And I folded it out of a ten dollar bill.

Edna: Wow. Maybe you can teach me some time.

Miriam: I would like that.

Edna: Okay.
