CLB 4: Woman Get the Vote

At the time of Confederation, only white men who owned property could vote in Canada. Women protested against this and asked for the right to vote. Finally, in 1917, the federal government started to give women the right to vote in federal elections - first to nurses in the first world war. Then, in 1918, most Canadian female citizens aged 21 and over were granted the right to vote in federal elections.
